Overview

DigitasLBi does not believe in pigeonholing technologists. Instead our organizational structure supports blended roles and the cross pollination of ideas and skills. Our technology team is organized around 16 areas of specialisation (or “pods”) representing core technical skill areas including java development, Adobe AEM, front-end development, security, technical architecture, DevOps, functional programming, as well as many others. As a technologist at DigitasLBi you join the pods most relevant to your interests and capabilities. These pods are responsible for developing and maintaining deep technical expertise in their respective discipline areas. Reflecting the fact that we live within an ever-evolving industry we modify our pods accordingly as technologies emerge and fade, allowing us to build capabilities in emerging topics.

Technology is not separated from the creative and strategic disciplines in the agency. Our technologists engage with project teams at an early stage, and serve creative and strategic roles in addition to more traditional technical architecture, development, testing and release management roles. This approach allows us to deliver work that is technologically innovative, appropriately architected, well scoped and delivered to the highest possible level of quality.

DigitasLBi is looking for talented front-end technologists to join our world-class Interface Development team. The Interface Development technologists are responsible for delivering high quality and cutting edge web experiences in HTML, CSS and JavaScript. You'll be passionate about web standards and finding innovative ways to use latest technology to solve our clients' needs.

We're currently looking for like-minded technologists who are keen to solve interesting problems for high-traffic, high-profile clients across a range of devices.
